I. INTRODUCTION

Mr. Gordon no longer wishes to serve as class representative in this case. (ECF 198, ¶ 33). The parties agree that this, by itself, is sufficient grounds to decertify the class. (ECF 172, pg. 18). Upon decertification of the class, there will be no class counsel to disqualify, which should present a relatively straightforward PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED RESPONSE TO DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DECERTIFY AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 1

1 matter within the scope of this case. However, Defendant's Motion to Disqualify 2 Class Counsel is not based on the needs or scope of this litigation, but rather 3 Defendant's interests in preventing what it labels as "copycat" litigation and 4 Defense counsel's competing interests in completely different cases, involving 5 different claims and fact patterns, pending in different courts.

6 With the parties agreeing that decertification is warranted, and therefore the 7 role of "class counsel" consequently obviated, Defendant's motivations for 8 disqualifying class counsel, subjecting non-parties to invasive and harassing 9 discovery demands (while avoiding any deposition of the Plaintiff himself), and 10 flooding the record with disparaging adjectives and insinuations, are the real 11 subject of their pending motions.

12 With respect to the merits of this case, and Robinhood's widespread and 13 continuing violations of Washington law, Defendant's cries of impropriety in this 14 litigation are both feigned and inconsequential. Despite Defendant's free-ranging 15 allegations that the attorneys involved in this case are engaged in various forms of 16 conspiracy, "claim manufacturing," and entrapment, none of this has any bearing 17 on the underlying merits of the case. Defendant should not be permitted to conduct 18 unbounded discovery, nor should the case be further stayed, so that the Defendant 19 can attempt to cook up novel and salacious accusations that, in the end, have

20 PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
21 DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 2

1 absolutely no bearing on the resolution of this case. If Mr. Gordon consented to 2 receive the text message at issue, then the parties agree that his claim fails under 3 RCW 19.190.070(1)(b). If he did not consent, then Defendant's accusations 4 change nothing.

5 Mr. Gordon denies that he consented to receive the text message at issue, 6 and Defendant has had nearly two years to investigate the veracity of that assertion 7 – so far turning up nothing more than the message sued on was sent by Plaintiff's 8 friend, who happens to be one of his attorneys' brother. That fact is hardly 9 surprising, given that the entire basis of this lawsuit is that Robinhood violated 10 RCW 19.160, et seq., by “assisting in the transmission” of a commercial text 11 message, as part of its “refer-a-friend” marketing scheme. Defense counsel's 12 invasive, overbroad, harassing, and seemingly unbounded discovery charade, 13 which targets Mr. Gordon's attorneys and his attorney's family on issues that have 14 no bearing on this case¹, should end immediately. The stay should be lifted so that 17 ¹ Since this case was commenced in October 2019, Defendant has never sought to 18 depose Plaintiff himself or sent him a single Interrogatory regarding whether or not 19 he consented to receive its commercial text message, and nothing in the text communications between Mr. Gordon and Brian Cameron or John Cameron, all of which have been produced to defense counsel, implies that Plaintiff consented to receive the text message at issue.

this case can proceed to whatever end the parties agree and, ultimately, whatever the Court decides.

II. ARGUMENT

A. Defendant’s Cry of “Manufactured Claim” is Not a Defense to a CEMA Violation.

Unlike most cases alleging violations of Washington’s Consumer Electronic Mail Act (CEMA), RCW 19.190, et seq., which typically involve companies directly transmitting commercial text messages without the consent of the plaintiff, this case alleges that Robinhood “assist[ed] in the transmission” of a commercial text message sent to Mr. Gordon by “provid[ing] substantial assistance or support which enables any person to formulate, compose, send, originate, initiate, or transmit a commercial electronic mail message or a commercial electronic text message.” RCW 19.190.010(1). This broad definition is not focused on who sent the message at issue. Rather, the only relevant question is whether Robinhood “assisted” in any of the ways set forth in the statute. Id. In this case, it undeniably did so. The entirety of CEMA focuses on the defendant’s actions, with the singular exception that if the recipient consented to receive the message in question, then no violation occurred. RCW 19.190.070(1)(b). Unable to prove Mr. Gordon’s consent in this case, Defendant now relies on hyperbole and attacks on Plaintiff’s counsel as its sole defense, none of which can be justified.

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 4

1 Courts have examined cases where the parties actually stipulate to facts 2 indicating the “manufacturing” of claims far more extensive than what Defendant 3 alleges in this case. For example, in Leyse v. Bank of Am., Nat'l Ass'n, 4 CV117128SDWSCM, 2020 WL 1227410, at *1 (D.N.J. Mar. 13, 2020), aff'd, 20-5 1666, 2021 WL 1997452 (3d Cir. May 19, 2021), a federal Telephone Consumer 6 Protection Act (TCPA) claim, the court found the following:

7 Plaintiff also worked as an investigator for his counsel of 8 record, Todd C. Bank, at the time of the Call, helping him 9 prepare TCPA lawsuits. In that role, Plaintiff called 10 companies to determine, inter alia, the number and 11 frequency of the calls they made. During these investigative 12 calls, Plaintiff used a false name, withheld the true purpose 13 of the calls, and secretly recorded the calls. He then provided 14 the recordings to Mr. Bank to use in TCPA litigations such 15 as this one. For performing “well over a hundred” 16 investigative calls, Plaintiff was paid $60 an hour and earned 17 between $40,000 and $75,000 ... [T]he record suggests 18 instead that he welcomed and consented to the March 19 11th Call.

20 In another TCPA action, Stoops v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 197 F. Supp. 3d 21 782 (W.D. Pa. 2016), the plaintiff in that case “purchased at least thirty-five cell phones and cell phone numbers with prepaid minutes for the purpose of filing lawsuits under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (“TCPA”).”

22 Although Plaintiff occasionally informed the caller to stop 23 calling, she intended for the calls to continue because she 24 ““was hopefully going to ask [her] lawyers to do trebling with 25 knowing and willful”” violations of the TCPA if they did

1 [citing sources]. Plaintiff has filed at least eleven TCPA cases 2 in this jurisdiction, although she “[does not] know how 3 many,” and has sent at least twenty pre-litigation demand 4 letters, although she “[does not] know” how many.

5 When questioned about the purchase of her cell phones, 6 Plaintiff testified:

7 Q. Are you purchasing these phones purposefully to cause 8 them to ring?

A. Yes.

9 Q. Okay. And you understand that the phones ringing is—is 10 with—is it your intention that these phone calls are going to 11 result then in some sort of a demand whether it's pre-litigation 12 or an actual lawsuit?

A. I believe so.

13 In Leyse and Stoops, the courts determined that because the plaintiffs freely 14 admitted that they were luring defendants into violating the TCPA, there was a 15 lack of standing. The reasoning used to dismiss Stoops, however, was later 16 rejected as bad law, following the holding in Lexmark International, Inc. v. Static 17 Control Components, Inc., 572 U.S. 118 (2014). Jawk Enterprises, LLC v.
18 Greenlight Energy, Inc., 19-CV-4212-ARR-SJB, 2019 WL 5881752, at *1 19 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 5, 2019). Yet, Defendant in this case does not argue lack of 20 Article III standing or any specific and concrete legal basis for alleging that Mr.
21 Gordon is inadequate. Rather, Robinhood feigns indignation at the notion that it was somehow entrapped into violating CEMA when Mr. Gordon’s friend sent him a “refer-a-friend” text message with Robinhood’s encouragement and assistance.

22 PLAINTIFF’S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
23 DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
24 AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 6

1 Essentially admitting that it violated CEMA, Robinhood now seeks a scapegoat to 2 absolve it of liability for its actions.

3 The concept of “entrapment” exists in Washington law, but never has it been 4 recognized in a consumer protection scenario. In State v. Racus, 7 Wn. App. 2d 5 287, 303, 433 P.3d 830, 838, review denied, 193 Wn.2d 1014, 441 P.3d 828 6 (2019), the defendant in an attempted child rape case appealed the trial court’s 7 disallowance of an entrapment defense. There, the court stated:

8 To prove the affirmative defense of entrapment, a defendant 9 must show, by a preponderance of the evidence, that he 10 committed a crime, that the State or a State actor lured or 11 induced him to commit the crime, and that the defendant 12 lacked the disposition to commit the crime. State v. Lively, 13 130 Wash.2d 1, 9, 921 P.2d 1035 (1996); RCW 9A.16.070.
14 Failure to prove either of these prongs is fatal to the defense 15 of entrapment. Lively, 130 Wash.2d at 9-10, 921 P.2d 1035.
16 However, entrapment is not a defense if law enforcement 17 “merely afforded the actor an opportunity to commit a crime.”
18 RCW 9A.16.070(2). Neither the defendant’s mere reluctance 19 to violate the law, nor the use of a normal amount of 20 persuasion to overcome the defendant’s resistance is not 21 entrapment. State v. Trujillo, 75 Wash. App. 913, 918, 883
P.2d 329 (1994).

22 Nobody induced or lured Robinhood into assisting in the transmission at 23 issue in this case. At worst, Robinhood was “afforded an opportunity” to violate 24 Washington law when one of its customers sent an invitation to another 25 Washington resident. Not only was Robinhood not reluctant, it actively

26 PLAINTIFF’S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
27 DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
28 AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 7

1 encouraged this and countless other violations by offering free stocks. In any 2 event, entrapment is a defense to a charged crime, not a civil cause of action.
3 David M. Vines, Appellant, v. City of Black Diamond, et al., Respondents., 81748-4 5-I, 2021 WL 2530970, at *3 (Wash. Ct. App. June 21, 2021).

5 Even if Mr. Gordon was found to have colluded with some other party to 6 receive the text message at issue in this case, which he did not, that would not be a 7 basis to find him inadequate as a plaintiff or a class representative. The law 8 requires that Mr. Gordon provide prior express written consent before anyone may 9 transmit or assist in the transmission of a commercial text message to him. Mr.
10 Gordon did not consent in any form to receive Robinhood's text message, nor did 11 he take any affirmative steps to lure Robinhood into violating Washington law.
12 Robinhood's refer-a-friend text solicitation worked exactly as Robinhood intended.

13 Likewise, even if Brian Cameron² had some discussion with his brother – or 14 anyone else – about Robinhood's illegal practices and corresponding consumer 15 rights and remedies, there is absolutely no authority for the idea that such behavior 16 is unethical, improper, or constitutes any wrongdoing whatsoever. Nor is it a basis 17

18 ² Brian Cameron, an experienced litigator, in good standing with all Washington 19 state and federal courts, and with no disciplinary history, testified under oath that he never instructed anyone to send the Robinhood text message at issue to Mr.
20 Gordon.

1 to avoid liability under CEMA. Either Robinhood assisted John Cameron in the 2 transmission of the commercial text solicitation to Mr. Gordon or it did not. Either 3 Mr. Gordon consented to receive the text message from John Cameron or he did 4 not. If Robinhood assisted the transmission, and Mr. Gordon did not consent, the 5 inquiry is over. Robinhood is liable for violating CEMA and therefore, 6 Washington's Consumer Protection Act (CPA), RCW 19.86, et seq.

7 Robinhood seems to argue that if it sketches out some kind of "conspiracy" 8 to force it to violate CEMA, then any claim that it violated the law automatically 9 fails, and both the consumer and his or her counsel should be subject to 10 reprimands. This idea is absurd in the context of Washington's consumer 11 protection jurisprudence. "Private enforcement of the CPA was not possible until 12 1971, when the legislature created the private right of action to encourage 13 it." Scott v. Cingular Wireless, 160 Wn.2d 843, 853 (2007) (citing *Hangman
Ridge Training Stables, Inc. v. Safeco Title Ins. Co.*, 105 Wn.2d 778, 783–84 15 (1986)). "Private actions by private citizens are now an integral part of CPA
16 enforcement." Id.; RCW 19.86.090. Furthermore, "[p]rivate citizens act as private 17 attorneys general in protecting the public's interest against unfair and deceptive
18 acts and practices in trade and commerce." Id. (citing Lightfoot v. MacDonald, 86 19 Wn.2d 331, 335–36, 544 P.2d 88 (1976)). Attorneys who inform consumers of 20

21 PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 9

1 their rights and remedies regarding prohibited acts and practices are not 2 “manufacturing claims,” as Defendant’s counsel suggests, (ECF No. 172), they are 3 doing their jobs as consumer advocates.

4 Regardless of who sent or initiated the text message at issue to Mr. Gordon, 5 Robinhood only has itself to blame for building and promoting a telephone app that 6 is designed to perform a function that intrinsically violates Washington law. None 7 of the targets of Robinhood’s current ire altered the software system that 8 Robinhood built. None of them formulated or composed the text message sent to 9 Mr. Gordon. Nobody conspired with anyone at Robinhood to get the company to 10 break the law so that Mr. Gordon could sue. While Mr. Gordon may also have a 11 $500 claim against John Cameron for assisting Robinhood in the transmission of 12 the text message he sent to his friend, that is not the subject of the present lawsuit.

13 B. Defendant’s Abuse of the Discovery Processes Must End.

14 In response to this Court’s May 26, 2021, Order (ECF No. 120) granting a 15 stay on proceedings, Defendant’s counsel has focused its discovery efforts almost 16 exclusively on plainly irrelevant, disproportionate, and harassing demands on non-17 parties. Since this case was originally filed in state court in October 2019, and in 18 the nearly six weeks since the court issued its stay order, Defendant’s counsel have 19 never sought to depose the Plaintiff in this matter, who they allege engaged in a

1 conspiracy to force Robinhood to violate CEMA. (ECF No. 172). If Defendant 2 could show that Mr. Gordon consented in advance to receive the text message at 3 issue in this case, then Robinhood would have a complete defense under RCW 4 19.190.070(1)(b), and this case would likely conclude on summary judgment.

5 Mr. Gordon has provided Defendant's counsel with copies of all 6 communications in his possession between himself and John Cameron, the person 7 Robinhood identified as the sender of the text message at issue in this case, none of 8 which support Defense counsel's conspiracy theory. (ECF No. 198, ¶ 27). Mr.
9 Gordon has also provided copies of all nonprivileged³ communications in his 10 possession between himself and attorney Brian Cameron, none of which support 11 Defense counsel's conspiracy theory. (ECF No. 198, ¶ 27). On his own initiative, 12 Mr. Gordon additionally provided copies of all "group chat" communications 13 involving himself, John Cameron, Brian Cameron, and others. (ECF No. 198, ¶ 14 30). Once again, none of these communications support Defense counsel's 15 conspiracy theory. (Id; see also ECF Nos. 173-1, 173-2). After John Cameron's 16 counsel produced all communications in his client's possession between his client 17 and Mr. Gordon, which included a handful of general, equally unsupportive texts

18 19 ³ Mr. Gordon has made clear that he will not oppose Defendant's request for in 20 camera review of privilege redactions in these communications. (ECF No. 137 ¶ 21 5).

1 exchanged after January 2020, Defendant's counsel disingenuously claimed that 2 Mr. Gordon was holding back on this irrelevant information, (ECF No. 172), 3 knowing full well that Mr. Gordon had no text records after January 2020, which 4 were lost when he had to replace his old phone. (ECF No. 198, ¶ 28; ECF No.
5 137-2). Defense counsel intentionally misrepresents these circumstances, 6 suggesting that Plaintiff's counsel's assurance regarding production of all 7 communications in Mr. Gordon's possession were "untrue," (ECF No. 172, pg.7), 8 even though that is exactly the assurance Plaintiff's counsel provided, as verified 9 by Defense counsel's own citations, (ECF No. 136, pg. 4; ECF No. 160, pg. 3).
10 Disregarding any genuine pursuit of information, Defendant's counsel instead 11 misstates the facts regarding Plaintiff's production as a way to disparage Mr.
12 Gordon's character, then attempts to use those contrived disparagements as 13 justification for subjecting various non-parties to invasive and oppressive 14 discovery demands (ECF No. 181, pg.5).

15 Undoubtedly concerned that Mr. Gordon's deposition testimony will further 16 undermine their conspiracy theory, Defendant's counsel has instead launched a 17 campaign of harassment and oppression against multiple non-parties for purposes 18 completely unrelated to this case. Rather than engaging in good-faith discovery to 19 vindicate their client's potential defenses through the parties and claims actually at

20 PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
21 DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 12

1 issue in this case, Defendant’s counsel has now confessed that their primary 2 motivation is to use this court’s time and non-party resources to conduct “back-3 door” discovery on other cases in which the present parties’ counsel are involved.
4 (ECF No. 148, pg. 5; ECF No. 149, pg. 4; ECF No. 176 ¶ 4).

5 In an effort to justify their harassment of non-parties, Defendant’s counsel 6 has also attempted to amend Mr. Gordon’s claims to include at least one more text 7 message that was never alleged in either his initial or First Amended Complaint.
8 (ECF No. 1-1 ¶¶ 5.6 – 5.9; ECF No. 9 ¶¶ 5.8 – 5.12). Plaintiff clearly and 9 specifically alleged that a single text message sent on July 24, 2019, violated 10 CEMA, RCW 19.190, et seq. (Id.). Whether because he missed, ignored, 11 consented to receive, or simply elected not to bring claims involving other text 12 messages, it was Mr. Gordon’s prerogative to raise whatever claims he chose in his 13 own lawsuit. While Defendant’s counsel now feigns confusion regarding the 14 single violative message alleged in Plaintiff’s First Amended Complaint, this 15 exclusive claim is exactly what Defendant offered in support of its previous 16 Motion to Dismiss, (ECF No. 11), repeatedly drawing attention to “the sole text 17 message” Mr. Gordon received, (Id. at pg. 16), and more specifically “the single 18 text message about which Plaintiff complains,” (Id. at pg. 18, fn. 4). In reality, 19 Defendant’s counsel wants to conduct irrelevant and invasive discovery on non-

20 PLAINTIFF’S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
21 DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO DECERTIFY

1 parties like Nathan Budke and Ewan Cameron not because it has anything to do 2 with vindicating their client's defense in this case, but because they improperly and 3 admittedly seek "back-door" discovery regarding other legal actions pending in 4 other courts, which involve completely different claims and fact patterns and, in 5 many cases, other Defense counsel. (ECF No. 148, pg. 5; ECF No. 149, pg. 4; 6 ECF No. 176 ¶ 4; ECF No. 201, ¶ 20).

7 Defendant's counsel has also admitted that its other motivation for pursuing 8 irrelevant and oppressive discovery from non-parties is to vilify and retaliate 9 against Plaintiff's counsel for serving as consumer advocates in other class actions 10 in Washington. (ECF No. 176 ¶¶ 4, -7, 9; ECF No. 148, pg. 5; ECF No. 149, pg.
11 4). All of this is based on an ever-evolving conspiracy theory in which Plaintiff's 12 counsel informs consumers of potential violations and their corresponding rights 13 and remedies in an effort to get those consumers to contact qualified counsel for 14 representation when those rights are violated. (ECF No. 201, ¶¶ 9-18, 21).
15 Defendant's counsel calls this activity "claims manufacturing" and characterizes 16 the same as "misconduct" worthy of ever-expanding, non-party discovery and 17 reputational disparagements to the record. (ECF No. 172; Passim).

18 In fact, Plaintiff's counsel regularly, openly, and proudly monitors 19 potentially violative conduct occurring in various business and industries; informs

20 PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
21 DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 14

1 their network of clients, colleagues, community partners, friends and family, and 2 others regarding these potential violations and associated consumer rights; then 3 represents or refers consumers who are actually subjected to the same violative 4 practices. (ECF No. 201, ¶¶ 8-9). This type of ongoing investigation and 5 advocacy is standard practice among consumer advocates in Washington, not some 6 kind of nefarious conspiracy to force businesses to violate the law so that people 7 can sue them. (Id. at ¶ 9). Unlike personal injury attorneys representing 8 unforeseen “accidents” or contract attorneys working with predetermined 9 objectives and outcomes, consumer protection advocates are expected to play a 10 special role “as private attorneys general in protecting the public's interest against 11 unfair and deceptive acts and practices in trade and commerce.” Scott, 160 Wn.2d 12 at 853. “Private actions by private citizens are now an integral part of CPA
13 enforcement.” Id.; RCW 19.86.090. Furthermore, “[p]rivate citizens act as private 14 attorneys general in protecting the public's interest against unfair and deceptive 15 acts and practices in trade and commerce.” Hangman Ridge, 105 Wn.2d at 783–84.
16 Plaintiff’s counsel fulfills this role by informing consumers of potential violations, 17 rights, and remedies through direct consultations, social interactions, continuing 18 legal education (CLE) presentations, community outreach, pro bono and volunteer 19 service through WSBA’s Moderate Means Program (MMP), Spokane County Bar

20 PLAINTIFF’S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
21 DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 15

1 Association's Consumer Advocacy Program (CAP), and other opportunities. (ECF
2 No. 201, ¶¶ 8-9). This is not only true for businesses engaging in potential CEMA 3 violations, but also debt collectors, landlords and property management companies, 4 motor vehicle dealers, consumer retailers, lenders, and many others. (Id. at ¶¶ 10-5 16). In the overwhelming majority of potential cases, consumers are reluctant to 6 proceed with relatively small-value claims against violators. (Id. at ¶ 18). It is far 7 less likely that consumers will be willing to stand as class representatives against 8 widespread consumer protection violations, such as those at issue in this case.
9 (Id.).

10 Defendant's counsel chooses to label, repeat, and publish this form of 11 advocacy as "claim manufacturing" and "misconduct" as pervasively as possible 12 not because it serves their client's defense, but because they hope it will discourage 13 plaintiffs from proceeding in other cases and dissuade Plaintiff's counsel from 14 operating as some of the only dedicated consumer protection firms in the state.
15 With respect to Defendant's pending motions, Defense counsel's oppressive tactics 16 against Plaintiff, his friends, and his counsel appear to have succeeded in 17 dissuading Mr. Gordon from continuing as class representative in this case. (ECF 18 No. 198, ¶ 33).

19

PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DECERTIFY

1 Defense counsel's attempt to attack pro hac counsel is similarly 2 disingenuous. Throughout the course of this litigation, Robinhood has persistently 3 and unrepentantly continued to violate Washington's anti-spamming laws through 4 its "refer-a-friend" solicitations, adding potentially hundreds of thousands more 5 violations to the hundreds of thousands already implicated in this case. If the court 6 decertifies the present class, and Berger Montague or any other firm brings another 7 putative class action against Robinhood for violating CEMA, it would be far from 8 the "copycat" action Defense counsel suggests, (ECF No. 172, pg. 7), but rather a 9 completely new action, involving an even larger putative class, with an even 10 stronger basis for an award of exemplary damages under RCW 19.86.090. Whether 11 or not this case proceeds, another lawsuit for exactly the same violations will be 12 filed.

13 Being fully aware of these facts, (ECF No. 172, pg. 18; ECF No. 133, pg. 6), 14 Defendant's counsel could have simply relied on Mr. Gordon's statements 15 regarding withdrawal as a basis for decertifying the class, which would then 16 obviate the need for class counsel and therefore deliver a complete result for their 17 client. Rather than focusing on their client's objectives in this case, Defendant's 18 counsel requested – and Plaintiff's counsel agreed – to exceed page limits for the 19 purposes of presenting their client's motions. Instead of focusing on the relevant

20 PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED RESPONSE TO
21 DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DECERTIFY
AND DISQUALIFY CLASS COUNSEL - 17

1 and stipulated issue of decertification, Defendant's counsel allocated the majority 2 of additional pages toward disparaging and potentially defamatory insinuations 3 related to other cases, which have nothing to do with the matter presently before 4 this court.

5 Should the court decertify the present class, Mr. Gordon requests that the 6 court also refocus both the parties' objectives and the court's resources on the 7 merits of this case, rather than Defense counsel's seemingly endless and invasive 8 discovery charade against Plaintiff's counsel and other non-parties who have 9 nothing to do with the claim at issue in Mr. Gordon's case. The court previously 10 stayed proceedings to allow Defendant to conduct discovery, and Defendant has 11 now, without relief from the stay, restarted substantive proceedings with its 12 motions to decertify and disqualify.

IV. CONCLUSION

14 Defendant seems intent on conducting an ever more expansive, invasive, and 15 speculative “investigation” into everything but the merits of their “consent” 16 defense under RCW 19.190.070(1)(b). At its core, and despite the innuendos, ad-17 hominem attacks, and generalized allegations of misconduct, the only viable 18 accusation that potentially impacts this case is that Mr. Gordon consented to 19 receive the text message that is the basis of this claim, which would defeat his

1 claims under RCW 19.190.070(1)(b). Although what constitutes “consent” 2 requires legal analysis, Plaintiff did not consent under any theory. Either Mr.
3 Gordon did or did not consent to receive the text message. Either Robinhood did 4 or did not assist in transmitting the text message (including formulating or 5 composing the message). RCW 19.190.010(1).

6 For these reasons, the Court should decertify the class, obviating the roles of 7 class counsel and the need to disqualify the same. To the extent the Court 8 continues its stay of proceedings, even after Defendant has proceeded with 9 substantive motions, the Court should refocus this case to the merits of the claims, 10 restrict discovery to what is deemed necessary to ascertain “consent” under 11 CEMA, and set hard deadlines for the stay to be lifted and a new scheduling order 12 to be issued.
